“There are challenges and opportunities at every stage of the employer-employee relationship. Whether I’m creating a leave policy, advising on a workplace investigation, or defending a wrongful termination lawsuit, I strive to provide practical and effective solutions that help employers achieve their goals.”

Katie Loberstein supports clients with their employment-related needs at every stage. She regularly advises employers on a range of day-to-day workplace matters, including employee policies, noncompete issues, employee investigations, performance issues, leave laws, and employee hiring and separation. She also prepares hiring and separation agreements, workplace policies and handbooks, and employee training materials.

When disputes arise, Katie defends employers in state and federal courts against a wide range of claims, including wrongful termination, noncompete violations, discrimination, retaliation, wage and hour violations, breach of contract, and protected leave interference. She also represents employers in investigations initiated by agencies such as the EEOC, Washington State Human Rights Commission, Seattle Office of Civil Rights, and the Washington State Attorney General’s Office.

Katie partners with clients in many different industries. Her work with clients includes educational institutions, technology companies, restaurants, healthcare organizations, financial institutions, and supermarkets, among others. Katie understands that employers often face unique industry-related employment challenges, and she enjoys tailoring her approach to fit the individual needs of her clients and the industries in which they work.

Prior to law school, Katie worked at King County Superior Court for several years.
