“I recognize that each client has individualized goals and believe that the only way to understand those goals is to listen. I try to create value by approaching each matter with the same objective: providing a seamless client experience and achieving cost-effective resolutions that leave clients satisfied.”

Ryan Hall focuses his practice on construction law. With an emphasis on litigation, he has represented owners, contractors, and public entities alike and has litigated breach of contract, construction lien foreclosure, and construction defect claims. He has also litigated a variety of matters outside of the construction industry, including employment claims, corporate governance disputes, and adversarial bankruptcy matters.

In addition to his litigation background, Ryan also has experience negotiating and drafting construction contracts, planning and forming business entities, and providing general business advice. He advocates on behalf of his clients by offering thoughtful, client-centric guidance.

Prior to joining Miller Nash, Ryan practiced civil litigation and commercial law in Dallas, Texas.
