“I aim for a holistic approach to compliance, security, and privacy as a way to efficiently protect clients amidst the rising risk of data breaches and vulnerabilities. With an eye on our digital age, I am a passionate speaker and writer on the cross-sections between data protection, privacy, and intellectual property.”

Leila Javanshir is a certified information privacy professional (CIPP-US) and a member of the firm’s technology and emerging business team. Leila began her career with Miller Nash as a summer associate in 2017 and assists with matters involving privacy, data security, intellectual property, vendor contracting, and federal and state regulatory compliance. A significant part of her practice includes providing privacy compliance advice and drafting consumer-facing privacy policies and terms that comply with applicable privacy and data protection frameworks.

Leila has extensive knowledge and experience with the California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA), Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), Children’s Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA), Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA), Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), and CAN-SPAM. She has also guided many of her clients through data security incidents to ensure their compliance with state notification laws.

She also works closely with the firm’s intellectual property team handling trademark and copyright matters. Leila advises a wide range of clients at all stages of the trademark protection process and regularly prepares trademark clearance search reports, responses to USPTO office actions, coexistence agreements, and cease and desist letters on behalf of her clients.

As a law student, Leila volunteered as a legal advocate with the University of Washington’s Immigrant Families Advocacy Project, where she assisted in obtaining U visas for her clients.

Prior to law school, Leila worked as a patent paralegal at an international law firm and served as a paralegal and investigator assistant with the King County Department of Public Defense.
