

Noah Ashman

 Associate

☎ 503.205.2370 📍 Portland Office
✉ noah.ashman@millernash.com
🐦 @millernashllp
📡 iplawtrends.com

“I combine my engineering background, careful attention to detail, and effective oral and written communication skills to understand clients’ technical goals and translate them into action that will help achieve those goals.”

Noah Ashman’s practice focuses primarily on patent prosecution but covers a range of issues involving all types of intellectual property. Noah utilizes his background in mechanical engineering to assist clients in protecting and managing their intellectual property assets.

Before joining Miller Nash, Noah served as a judicial clerk for the Honorable Debra E. Velure in the Lane County Circuit Court, where he assisted with preparing bench notes, memoranda, orders, and judgments in a wide variety of civil matters. Noah was also an extern for the University of Oregon Office of the General Counsel, where he conducted research and drafted memoranda on a variety of legal issues, including data privacy and copyright licensing.

Professional Activities

- Multnomah Bar Association, Member
- Oregon State Bar, Member
 - Intellectual Property Section, Member
- OGALLA, the LGBT Bar Association of Oregon, member

Publications

- “Outed by Advertisements: How LGBTQ Internet Users Present a Case for Federal Data Privacy Legislation,” 99 OR. L. REV. 523 (2021)

Personal Activities

When he is not in the office, Noah can be found hiking and camping around the Pacific Northwest, playing tennis, and running.

Education

J.D., University of Oregon
School of Law, 2021

- Editor in Chief,
Oregon Law Review,
2020-2021

B.S., University of California, Los Angeles,
mechanical engineering,
2018

Bar Admissions

Oregon, 2022