“I am a creative problem-solver who understands and appreciates how legal decisions and strategies will impact the goals of mission-driven entities. I strive to provide all clients with practical solutions.”

Souvanny Miller represents public and private clients in both advice and litigation matters. She advises universities, community colleges, public school districts, and education service districts in a wide variety of areas including regulatory compliance, personnel matters, and constitutional law. She has helped various education institutions to develop and implement Title IX sexual harassment policies. Souvanny advises public entities relating to policy and municipal code drafting and revisions, public meetings laws, public records laws, planning and zoning, First Amendment issues, franchises and franchise fees, contract disputes, and personnel matters, including as the former city attorney of a small town.

Souvanny also represents public entities and private clients in arbitrations, administrative proceedings, in Oregon circuit courts, and before the Oregon Court of Appeals. She is responsive and considerate of her client’s overarching goals during each stage of the case. Souvanny’s litigation background is broad. She has represented private clients in tort, contract, and business litigation. She has also represented public and private clients in land use matters and regulatory compliance matters as well as in various other administrative law proceedings.

During law school, Souvanny served as a judicial extern for the Honorable Michael H. Simon at the U.S. District Court of Oregon and as a law clerk for the Trial and Appellate Divisions of the Oregon Department of Justice. After law school, Souvanny served as a law clerk for the Oregon School Boards Association where she assisted staff attorneys in advising school boards and superintendents by conducting legal research, updating model policies consistent with changing laws and regulations, and writing case law summaries.
