“I am by nature very curious and enjoy working with our attorneys to gain a deep understanding of our clients’ objectives. Through excellent organization, experience, and my interest in the business goals of our clients, I am able to help clients achieve successful outcomes.”

Patrick Racine joined Miller Nash in 2017 and works with the firm’s intellectual property, tribal, financial services, and cannabis teams. As a paralegal, he uses his effective time management and strong organization skills to help clients achieve their goals. His experience also includes supporting electronic discovery, including document process and database management, as well as a strong background as an administrative assistant with the firm’s condemnation team.

Personal Activities

When not at work, Patrick enjoys reading, cooking, listening to music, gardening, woodworking, brewing beer, riding and working on his motorcycle, and, most of all, spending time with his toddler.

Education

B.A., Portland State University, Russian & Political Science, 2013
