“I am a creative problem-solver who understands and appreciates how legal decisions and strategies will impact the goals of mission-driven entities. I strive to provide all clients with practical solutions.”

Souvanny Miller represents mission-driven public and private entities in litigation, pre-dispute, and general advice matters. She advises a wide range of educational institutions and municipal clients in a multitude of areas to help them minimize financial, reputational, and operational risk. Souvanny’s advocacy includes representing universities, schools, and municipalities in arbitrations, administrative proceedings, federal court, Oregon circuit courts, and before the Oregon Court of Appeals, as well as in board meetings and executive sessions. In any forum, Souvanny is responsive and considerate of her client’s overarching values and goals.

Souvanny regularly assists clients with questions of regulatory compliance, personnel matters, and constitutional law, and has helped various education institutions to develop and implement Title IX sexual harassment policies. Souvanny also provides advice relating to public meetings laws, public records laws, policy and municipal code drafting and revisions, planning and zoning, First Amendment issues, and contract disputes.

During law school, Souvanny served as a judicial extern for the Honorable Michael H. Simon at the U.S. District Court of Oregon. After law school, Souvanny served as a law clerk for the Oregon School Boards Association where she assisted staff attorneys in advising school boards and superintendents.
