“I take a practical, solution-driven approach to business disputes, with a focus on our client’s objectives and business goals, both short- and long-term. Insurance companies are tough adversaries, and in those cases, it is particularly critical to listen to and understand our client’s needs. Despite my record of victories in the courts, I understand that not every dispute requires win-at-all-costs litigation to be a success, so I work with each client to understand and meet their goals.”

Seth Row leads the firm’s Insurance Recovery practice team and focuses his litigation practice primarily on insurance coverage disputes—exclusively on the policyholder side. In his more than 20 years of practice, he has assisted clients in recovering millions of dollars under nearly every kind of insurance policy, including property, business income, Directors & Officers, representations & warranties, marine, and cyber-risk policies. Seth has litigated several issues of first impression in Oregon, including the duty to defend EPA enforcement actions under long-tail liability policies, coverage for intellectual property and timber trespass disputes, and recovery of attorney fees.

Seth also has considerable experience in a broad range of business litigation, including transaction-related breach of contract claims and commercial torts. His clients range from banks, manufacturers, publicly traded entities, and technology startups to agriculturalists, non-profits, colleges, and universities.

Seth is a Fellow in the American College of Coverage Counsel, the premier association of lawyers who focus their practice on the representation of insurers and policyholders. One of only 350 Fellows, Seth is the first policyholder-side attorney from Oregon to be elected. Seth is also a frequent speaker, advisor, and author on insurance law, currently serving as the editor of Miller Nash’s insurance-coverage blog, The Northwest Policyholder.

Representative Experience

Insurance Recovery Litigation

- Represented manufacturer in obtaining coverage for advertising injury claims, resulting in advantageous settlement after successful appeal to the Ninth Circuit.
- Achieved positive outcome for our client with a successful suit against property insurer over coverage for damage to safety equipment caused by fire at agricultural products warehouse.
- Represented family-owned machinery company, at trial and on appeal, over long-tail coverage for environmental claims at Portland Harbor Superfund site. This resulted in pro-policyholder decision on multiple issues of first impression regarding duty to defend EPA information requests and “PRP” letters, and constitutionality of Oregon statutes.
- Successfully appealed trial court rulings on issues of first impression in Oregon involving coverage for timber trespass claims asserted against logging company, resulting in complete victory for client, including award of attorney fees.

Business Disputes

- Represented buyer of hospitality businesses over breaches of representations and warranties in sales agreement.
- Following dispositive motions practice in Washington state court, achieved a favorable settlement in a negligence suit against an accounting firm over failure to maintain an insurance policy.
- Represented a technology start-up at trial in dispute with government contractor, resulting in complete jury verdict and award of fees.
- Achieved dismissal from protracted personal injury litigation for subcontractor, based on indemnity clauses in marine contract.
