“The most gratifying part of my practice is helping clients achieve their goals, even when those are challenging. Clients value my calm, practical, and collaborative approach, and the care I take to help them determine which risks are worth taking.”

Cozette Tran-Caffee enjoys working on all aspects of real estate deals and development, and can help clients buy, sell, lease, finance, evaluate, entitle, and divide their real property. Cozette works with clients across a number of industries, including renewable energy, public entities, affordable housing, and food, beverage, and hospitality.

Cozette has experience with a variety of land use matters, including annexation and other boundary changes; comprehensive plan map and zoning map amendments; discretionary design reviews, including historic resource review; land divisions, including subdivisions, partitions, and property line adjustments; land use due diligence and other pre-purchase or pre-development issues; and master planning and amendments. She regularly advises public entities (including cities, school districts, colleges, and special districts) on land use matters. Her experience includes advice on obtaining entitlements on behalf of public entities, and advice to public entities in their role as decision makers on land use matters.
