Our technology and emerging business team provides comprehensive legal services to high technology companies, emerging businesses, private businesses, higher education institutions, and public entities that drive progress and transformation in the tech landscape.

Whether our clients need assistance with angel and venture capital investments, intellectual property, patents, mergers and acquisitions, employment, entity formation, contracts, licensing, data security and privacy, funding, tax, or executive compensations, we deliver solutions. Covering a broad spectrum of industries and sectors, our clients develop, market, implement, fund and/or sell consumer products (including food and beverage), medical devices, computer hardware, electronics, software, and web-based products and services. Our clients encompass Fortune 500 companies, tech leaders and disruptors, inventors and innovators, and the region's fastest-growing companies who are helping to shape the future.

Ultimately, our attorneys help to bring together technologies with users. We assist research labs and universities with technology transfer, commercialization, and licensing, as well as with acquisitions or collaborations with emerging tech providers. We negotiate alliances or joint ventures with organizations in the same or different market sectors, and we help lay the groundwork for sponsorships or partnerships delivering new service offerings or automating operational functions.

Our group includes diverse leaders in the technology space who are frequently sought out to speak and write for industry organizations, serve as active volunteers for entrepreneurial, tech, and community associations, and teach as adjunct professors at higher education institutions.
