“I rely on my adaptability and thorough approach to provide clients with practical, tailored solutions to address real challenges.”

Michael Zangl is a member of the firm’s employment law & labor relations and education law practice teams. He uses a thoughtful and proactive approach to supporting the firm’s clients in a variety of employment and education matters. Michael has experience representing clients in federal court and defending education institutions against constitutional and tort claims. He also serves higher education clients by conducting independent workplace investigations related to discrimination and fulfillment of job responsibilities.

Michael began at Miller Nash as a summer associate in 2022 and 2023 where he supported the firm’s real estate, bankruptcy, tribal, and education and employment teams with research and drafting memoranda. Michael also served as a judicial extern for the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Washington.

Before law school, Michael had a career in higher education administration and student life where he gained a deep understanding of how higher education institutions function and the issues they face on a daily basis.
