“I am committed to understanding our clients’ goals and providing real-world solutions to achieve those goals. Most of all, I strive to be a trusted and dependable partner to our clients, in all facets of their legal needs.”

Brad VandenDries is a seasoned litigator who represents clients in construction, real estate, and insurance disputes, with a particular emphasis on resolving claims involving delays, defects, payment issues, and coverage disputes. He also has extensive experience drafting and negotiating sophisticated commercial construction contracts on behalf of owners, developers, contractors, and design professionals. In addition to his industry-specific work, Brad provides comprehensive litigation support across all phases of a dispute, from pre-litigation strategy and risk assessment to discovery, motion practice, and trial preparation.

Brad began his legal career clerking for the Honorable Thomas Neville and the Honorable Jonathan Medema in Idaho’s Fourth Judicial District Court, where he gained valuable insights into judicial decision-making and trial strategy. Before joining Miller Nash, Brad practiced at a full-service law firm in Boise, where he advised a broad range of clients in the construction and real estate sectors and represented them in both litigation and alternative dispute resolution proceedings.
