“My focus is on delivering results that fit. By combining a thorough understanding of court procedure with a pragmatic approach to litigation, I partner with clients to navigate disputes effectively. I am committed to ensuring that my advocacy is tailored to my clients’ unique budgets, priorities, and long-term goals.”

Lacee Curtis focuses her practice on commercial litigation. Through her extensive experience in both commercial and civil litigation and state supreme court judicial clerkship, she has developed a proven ability in meticulous legal research, incisive fact-finding, and the precise application of rules of evidence and procedure in courtroom settings. Lacee is adept in drafting legal documents, advising on legal strategy, and presenting complex legal arguments in court. She also specializes in transactional and litigation real estate matters, and she is dedicated to helping her clients find solutions that fit their budgets and priorities.

Before joining Miller Nash, Lacee practiced at a midsize Washington law firm, focusing on civil litigation matters such as debt collection, real estate and homeowners’ community association disputes, breach of contract, and receiverships. Her experience also includes clerking for judges at the Washington State Supreme Court and Utah Supreme Court, where she gained a deep understanding of judicial procedure and decision-making.
