“I help financial services clients navigate challenging situations, such as dealing with nonperforming counterparties, regulatory compliance inquiries, and insolvency litigation. I bring a pragmatic, attentive approach to help clients identify cost-effective solutions to messy problems.”

Jesús Miguel Palomares is a partner in the firm’s bankruptcy & creditors’ rights practice team who brings experience and expertise to serve clients in commercial lending, financing, real estate, and regulatory compliance matters. Jesús advises businesses and individuals regarding distressed commercial debt and consumer credit issues in and out of court, through loan workouts, restructuring, reorganization, and liquidations. Whether it be informal negotiation, alternative dispute resolution, or litigation, Jesús provides a solutions-oriented approach to obtain the best outcome for clients.

Jesús represents creditor clients in contested matters, adversary proceedings, and other litigation incidental to commercial litigation, including receiverships and bankruptcy proceedings. Jesús helps clients avoid litigation through foreclosure, loan modification, and pragmatic settlements designed to protect against future bankruptcy issues. He advises credit unions, banks, and other financial services clients on commercial and consumer lending and regulatory compliance matters. Jesús works with clients from a variety of industries, including construction lienholders, credit managers, property owners, developers, and small businesses.

Jesús serves on the Board of Directors of the Rivermark Community Credit Union, a not-for-profit financial cooperative that serves over 180,000 members. In this role, he helps the credit union pursue its goal of improving the financial lives of its members. During law school, Jesús spent time as a summer clerk at Hogan Lovells BSTL, S.C., one of Mexico’s leading law firms.
