“My approach to providing exceptional service involves collaboration with clients to ensure that advice is practical and meets their goals. I am responsive, thorough, and personable, and I enjoy getting to know our clients.”

Sophie von Bergen represents businesses and individuals in all phases of litigation, with a particular focus on complex commercial disputes and insurance recovery for policyholders. She practices in state and federal courts throughout Oregon and regularly handles matters involving substantial damages and significant public scrutiny, including high-profile plaintiff-side cases and the defense of putative class actions. Drawing on her experience representing both plaintiffs and defendants, Sophie approaches each matter with a balanced perspective, anticipating opposing arguments and advocating strategically and effectively for her clients.

During law school, Sophie was a judicial extern to the Honorable Magistrate Judge Stacie F. Beckerman at the U.S. District Court for the District of Oregon where she researched and drafted opinions in civil cases. She also advised businesses at the Small Business Legal Clinic on transactional matters, including on intellectual property issues. Sophie has also co-authored a chapter on issues of gender and politics in developing countries and Lewis & Clark Law Review published her Note on causes of action against companies engaged in “greenwashing.”

Representative Experience

Corporate Governance & Shareholder Disputes

- Representing individuals in corporate governance disputes involving Oregon LLCs and corporations.

Business & Corporate

- Defended financial services organization against claims from creditor of educational institution.
- Represent financial institutions against claims under consumer protection statutes.

Class Actions

- Defended large retail company in putative class action with claims of alleged violations of the unlawful trade practices act.
- Represent and advise businesses in class action settlement and administration.
- Defending businesses in class actions.

Insurance Recovery

- Major builder's risk insurance recovery for new Oregon data center. Successful litigation and mediated resolution of a project owner's $8 million claim against its builder's risk insurance carriers following two explosions and fires during the construction of a 250,000 sq. ft. data center in Washington County, Oregon. The builder's risk insurers' untimely and unreasonable claims adjustment resulted in zero payment to the project owner prior to Miller Nash's involvement. Litigation involved extensive discovery of electronically stored information and depositions, in addition to summary judgment briefing and other motions. With the assistance of a mediator, the vast majority of the owner's losses were recovered.
- Represented Portland-area businesses seeking coverage for business interruption losses sustained from COVID-19, including in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.
