“I help clients succeed by understanding their industry, listening to their needs, and crafting solutions to meet their goals. The most rewarding work involves building relationships, collaboration, and innovative problem-solving.”

Diana Ramos focuses her practice on the financial services industry, with extensive experience in regulatory compliance, corporate governance, and operational efficiency. She provides strategic counsel to banks, credit unions, and other financial institutions on navigating complex regulatory frameworks, ensuring adherence to industry standards, and optimizing internal operations. Diana also has significant experience advising clients on mergers and acquisitions, helping manage risk, streamline transactions, and achieve successful integration. Her comprehensive understanding of the financial services industry allows her to deliver practical, results-driven solutions that align with clients’ business goals.

During law school Diana served as a judicial extern for the Oregon Court of Appeals, where she assisted with reviewing briefs, creating bench memos, and preparing opinions. She also has extensive experience in the banking industry, having worked in financial institutions for over 15 years. Diana started her career in a small credit union allowing her to gain a general understanding of banking operations, regulatory requirements, and lending activities. Before joining Miller Nash, Diana spent ten years working for a large national bank in roles that included credit risk management and compliance.
