“I am receptive to the needs of clients. I like to gain detailed information regarding the concerns of the client and use that information to craft the most advantageous solution. I am committed to providing clients with candor, professionalism, and favorable outcomes.”

Brianna Morrison focuses her practice on representing creditors across a range of commercial and bankruptcy matters. Her work includes creditor-side representation in collection actions, enforcement and collection of judgments, claim and delivery proceedings, and complex bankruptcy litigation.

Brianna has developed particular depth in Chapter 11 agricultural bankruptcies, where she represents lenders and creditors navigating the intersection of farm operations, secured lending, and reorganization. She also handles fraudulent transfer litigation in bankruptcy court. Brianna brings firsthand experience from her time in South Carolina, where she represented Chapter 7 trustees in avoidance actions, including preferential and fraudulent transfers under the Statute of Elizabeth. That background informs the practical, litigation-tested perspective she brings to creditor clients today.

Before joining Miller Nash, Brianna practiced at a firm in South Carolina, where she handled Chapter 7 and Chapter 11 matters, including Subchapter V reorganizations, and developed a strong foundation in the mechanics of the Bankruptcy Code.

During law school, Brianna clerked for the National Indian Country Training Coordinator at the National Advocacy Center in Columbia, South Carolina, and contributed to drafting a Family Law Code for the Catawba Nation. She also served as a judicial extern for the Honorable David R. Duncan of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of South Carolina, where her research focused on the Statute of Elizabeth.

Representative Experience

Debtor-Creditor

- Represented national rental car company in a state court arbitration regarding a collection matter, obtaining a general judgment based on the arbitration award in favor of client, leading to payment in satisfaction of judgment.
- Assisted a client in the plumbing, waterworks, and hydronics industry with domestication of foreign judgment and garnishment, leading to payment in full and satisfaction of judgment.
- Assisted client with ejectment in Washington, leading to the client gaining full possession of the property.
- Negotiated settlements for numerous clients in various collection matters, leading to payment in full.
- Represented opportunistic real estate fund in objections to plans in Chapter 13 bankruptcy proceedings.

Education

- Prepared responses to Borrower Defense to Repayment Applications for multiple higher education clients, skillfully navigating the associated regulations.

Prior to Joining Miller Nash LLP

- Represented Chapter 7 debtors in a reply to an objection to the debtors' homestead exemption in the debtors' house and burial plots. The court denied the objection and declared that under the South Carolina homestead exemption statute a debtor can claim an exemption in both a homestead and burial plot if the combined value is below the exemption limit.
- Assisted the supervising attorney in representing a hotel in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding. Drafted first day motions and assisted the client in completing the initial debtor interview and monthly operating reports.
- Represented the Chapter 7 trustee in multiple preference actions against creditors and negotiated favorable settlements.
- Conducted multiple Bankruptcy Rule 2004 examinations for the Chapter 7 trustee to uncover potential assets for the estate and potential Statute of Elizabeth claims.
