“Drawing from my litigation and regulatory compliance experience, I develop effective solutions to clients’ complex business and environmental problems.”

Julie Avery’s practice focuses on a variety of litigation and regulatory matters, including on environmental enforcement, litigation and compliance, renewable energy transactional matters, and general commercial litigation. Julie assists clients with compliance and enforcement issues under the Clean Air Act (CAA), the Clean Water Act (CWA), the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA), the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), and similar state programs in California and Oregon. Julie also has experience with regulatory issues and investigations involving per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS). She has utilized her litigation and environmental experience to negotiate and draft Engineering, Procurement, and Construction (EPC) contracts for clients with renewable energy projects throughout the country. Julie also has experience in state and federal actions involving contract and other business disputes and a broad array of environmental, energy, and insurance coverage issues.

Julie also brings significant general litigation experience, with a particular emphasis on defending clients in complex class action matters across a range of industries. She represents businesses in state and federal courts in high-stakes disputes involving consumer, environmental, and commercial claims, and regularly guides clients through all phases of litigation, from early case assessment and motion practice through discovery, settlement negotiations, and trial preparation. Julie’s practical, defense-oriented approach is informed by her experience with multi-party litigation and coordinating strategy across jurisdictions.

During law school, Julie served as an extern to Judge Amy D. Hogue at the Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles, and as a full-time honors law clerk with the United States Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C., where she worked for the Mobile Source Enforcement Branch of the Air Enforcement Division. Before joining Miller Nash, Julie was a litigation associate at a California law firm, working with public entities in the areas of construction, real estate, and environmental regulation.
